Rip Collins, Mitchell, Miller and Pratt, Former Yankee Players, Are All Conspicuous in Downfall of Old Teammates; Ruth Gets 29th Homer

By W. B. Hanna

Nobody bot the Red Sox, made up of Yankee cast-offs and other fotsam, tumbled the Yankees out of first place yesterday. The Red Sox won both games of the double-header-4 to 3 and 6 to 5-and though the Camage done to the Yankees' pennant chances wasn't irreparable, by any means, those chances were hurt more than a little.

yesterday, if not with success, and tenacious grit will go far.

Excellent pitching by Pennock, then by Collins, and inspitude by the Yankees in the field and in tactics pursued beat the champions. Pennock had a good mixture of southpaw stuff and Collins had a fast ball, which jumped past the Yankee bats. Both had effective control.

Defeats in the support of both Hoyt in the first game and Brush in the second were costly, but Bush's pitching did not assaw up to his standard. Hoyt's was good enough and would have won the first game if Ruth hadn't come in pell-mell after the manner of the bull in the china shop, well known to song and story, and caused Aaron Ward to lose a steeple fly on which two runs weaved home. Sam Jones as relief pitcher in each game disported in first class form, if that's any consolation.

Herert Pennock and Rip Collins pitched as though their whole lives had been devoted to preparation for this ill-fated double-header. It wasn't like that in the clden days, with Collins, at least, not often. Other erst-while Yankees who lent a hand to sinking the two pronged harpoon into Yankees were Johnny Mitchell, with while Yankees who lent a hand to sinking the two pronged harpoon into Yankees were Johnny Mitchell, with a fluke home run, which caused a bitter protest from the New York players; Elmer Miller, with a scratch three-bagger, poorly played by Ruth, and the heavy-footed Pratt, with a smack into the low grandstand.

To offset the Back Bay homers, but not sufficiently, was Ruth's twenty-ninth and Meusel's into the lower stand, each with nobody on base—drat the luck.

The Yankees played hard, but not good ball mechanically or smart ball. Ward apparently missed a sign on a hit and run play and let Schang perish trying to reach third. Ruth and Ward, trying to avoid a collision, lost a pop fly. And a run was presented to the Red Sox on a white gold platter, with engraved Yankee crest, when the infield played ball in the first inning of the second game and threw out at first one man while another trotted in from third, who could have been erased for the trying had the infield been playing in.

Ruth hit a home run against the Ruth hit a home run against the green frieze in the first inning of the rist game. The Red Sox made four hits and three runs in the third inning. Two of the runs came in when the Harris's perpendicular fly, with two out, spouted to short right, and Ruth's mad charge for it scared Wardy out of the way. The latter was set for it, and it would have been like picking cherries.

ond encounter, and Cecil Duff, a recruit from Aberdeen, in the South Dakota League, went to the mound and held the Tigers scoreless. He pitched a steady game, and started the rally in the fourth with a single, which broke the tie. After that the visitors played erratic ball, while Chicago hit opportunely.

Umpire Decides Otherwise

Mitchells home run, made in the seventh, hit just inside the foul line and just about reached the wall. A fan, one of the kind who thinks more of a baseball than of a ball game, reached for it, and the Yankees claimed it wouldn't have gone in the stand. Umpire Evans decided it would. If the umpires are in doubt over occurrences of this character they give the hit a two-bagger.

a bad ball and was thrown out by the pitcher. Nothing was gained by hitting at the ball.

Miller in the first inning of the second tripled high to right. It plopped into a large unprotected area in right, in front of Ruth and abaft Ward and Pipp. The ball had nettles on it or something, and when Ruth finally picked it up Miller was warping into third. He scored while Scott was throwing out Burns. "What's the lides?" queried the unknowing, who third. He scored while Scott was throwing out Burns. "What's the idea?" queried the unknowing, who don't understand the subtleties of baseball. "Why not throw that man out at the plate?"

Scott's fumble started a Boston parade in the fourth, which also contained two hits, a walk and Dugan's muff of a throw, all inimical to the New York cause. The Yanks made three runs, three steals and two hits and walked twice in the third, the most three runs, three steals and two hits and walked twice in the third, the most thriving inning they had.

A homer followed a double in the fifth by the Boston side, alas. Meusel scored in the sixth, and the Yankees rallled in the ninth, dying hard, just as they did in the first game. Baker singled—it was a pleasure to see him again—Ruth and Pipp singled, then Schang fanned for the final out.

Dugan's error in the second game was excusable, for a man was coming into him full tilt. Otherwise Dugan played a fine game and made one wonderful pick-up.

Ruth is getting to be a sure shot thrower. He cut down Burns at the plate as the latter tried to score on a

The Yanks burst out with an orgy of base stealing. Five in one day and three in one inning was wild revelry for them. Ruel's poor throwing helped.

Burns stole a base in the first game, on which he got a tremendous lead on Hoyt. Schang had no chance to throw him out, and following that malefeasance came two hits and three runs. The Yanks paid dearly for miscues.

There have been several slow pitchers in these metropolitan parts this summer, but Pennock won the honors with no second within sight. That sort of thing may be disconcerting to opposing batters, but it also is distateful to the people who put up their foliar ten.

Rob Meusel worked the trap ball trick and did it very well. It was no facilt of his that a double play didn't easue. Ruel's alertness on the bases provented a double killing, but Meusel's play was well conceived.

Miller Lets McGrawmen Down With 5 Hits and Mar. quard Yields but 6; Giants' Pitching Staff Again Wavers and McQuillan Is Shelled From Mound

By John Kieran

BOSTON, Sept. 5 .- Hark, from the tomb a doleful voice. The George Washington Grant team turned in its grave in the National League cellar at Braves Field to-day and in doing so sadly disturbed the equilibrium of the Clan McGraw, which at that time was trying to do a song as a dance number on the corpse. As a result the Giants were tumbled into the of a double defeat, and in addition suffered grievous mental torment or the shocking disaster.

"Not only defeated but shut out." & wailed J. J. McGraw, for "Bullet) Frank" Miller coated the world's champions with a thick layer of kalsomine in the opening struggle, and gained a 6 to 0 decision over half the New York pitching staff. In the second engager Pe ment, Richard de Marquis, the wandering left-hander, who has almost com-the joy in Hubtown. The lanky Rube not only humbled his former companions, but he did so at the expense of Signor Hugh McQuillan, the recently acquired and highly expensive Be flinger who used to do his heavy ent-

The wavering pitching staff of the Giants has reached a point where the boys are scheduled to appear at least twice a day on the mound. While Miller was holding the world's champions to five hits and no runs in the twice a day on the mound. While Miller was holding the world's champions to five hits and no runs in the early contest, Bill Ryan, Virgil Barnes, Carmen Hill and Claude Jonnard were carrying the New York vots. The c'an McGraw gathered six hits and two runs off Marquard in the second festive engagement, while Hugh McQuillan, Bill Ryan and Virgil Barnes paraded in the order named. Ryan walked right in, turned right around and walked right out again in the first zame. His wildness presented the Brawes with a run, which was enough to win that particular pastime, and Rosy Bill was yanked before the opening stanza had been concluded. "V Period" Barnes was combed for three runs in the fifth, and Jonnard for two more in the seventh. All the damage in the second zame was done at the expense of McQuillan. A fusillade of hits in the sixth inning broke up a great pitching duel, gave the Braves four runs and chased the slabster to the showers. In their second appearance of the afternoon the pailbearers, Virgil Barnes and Bill Ryan, gave the corpse a gentle portage to the cemetery.
